CAIRO

THE PYRAMIDS AND SPHINX OF GIZA

You have not seen Egypt unless you have seen the famous Giza pyramids and Sphinx, which is one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. They were built in the fourth dynasty by Cheops, Kephren & Mycerinos.

Stands on a desert plateau some 15 km out of Cairo, immutably majestic as they have been for forty five centuries. The Sound and Light shows performed, in different languages, are unforgettable experiences.

Please note that you should see the pyramid in day and night.

THE STEP PYRAMID

The Step Pyramid is located in Sakkara, few miles south of Giza, it was built by the great architect Imhotep for king Zoser, the founder of the third dynasty. The first pyramid ever built, not planned to be a pyramid, originally it was a mastaba (one step) and then has been enlarged to several steps. It marks a transitional phase in the evolution of an architectural and mystic concept from the simple mastaba to the smooth-sided pyramid in its final form. Sakkara contains a lot of tombs for different noblemen dating back to the old kingdom, showing daily life scenes in very good condition with bright vivid original colors.

SAKKARA AND MEMPHIS

About 27 km south-west of Cairo is also the setting for the pyramids of Onas, the mastabas of Mereruka, Ti and Ptahotep. Here, too, is the Serapeum where the sacred Apis bulls were entombed, each in a massive sarcophagus, in cavernous underground galleries. Adjoining Sakkara is Memphis, site of the capital established by Mena (or Narmer) who united Upper and Lower Egypt into one Kingdom and founded the First Dynasty about 3400 B.C. A gigantic statue of Ramsis II and the exquisite Alabaster Sphinx are of particular note. Memphis is the oldest capital in Egypt, dating back to the first king of the first dynasty Mena (Narmer).
THE EGYPTIAN MUSEUM was first built in Boulak. In 1891, it was moved to Giza Palace of "Ismail Pasha" which housed the antiquities that were later moved to the present building. The Egyptian Museum is situated at Tahrir square in Cairo. It was built during the reign of Khedive Abbas Helmi II in 1897, and opened on November 15, 1902 (More History). It has 107 halls. At the ground floor there are the huge statues. The upper floor houses small statues, jewels, Tutankhamon treasures and the mummies.

The Museum also comprises a photography section and a large library. The Egyptian museum comprises many sections arranged in chronological order.

COPTIC MUSEUM Founded in 1908, this museum houses Coptic art from Graeco Roman times to the Islamic era drawn from Cairo, the desert monasteries and Nubia. In recent years it has undergone a major restoration, and parts have been closed to the public. By the time you read this, the full collection should be on show. Exhibits include textiles, frescoes, stonework, woodwork, manuscripts, glass and ceramics.

THE MUSEUM OF ISLAMIC ART is truly a wonderful reservoir of Islamic antiquities. It has a vast supplement of about 10200 artifacts that one cannot explore in a single day. The museum displays arts from the different Islamic eras that Egypt passed through including the Fatimid, Turkish and Persian periods. From the Fatimid Period, one can find a fine collection of wooden panels, which are the only surviving pieces of the Western Palace of Al Kahira Palace. And people love the craftsmanship of the Mihrabs of the tombs of Sayeda Ruqayya and Sayeda Nafeesa.

KHAN EL KHALILI There's absolutely nothing in Cairo like exploring the enormous shopping labyrinth of Khan El Khalili, the city's largest souk that has preserved much of its original structure since its days as a famous medieval bazaar. Tourists and Egyptians alike arrive at this densely populated maze of streets and alleyways to find all sorts of gifts, including Egyptian antiques, fine handmade crafts, shishas and spices.
